BILLINGS – Excellence in academics and involvement in the community are among the criteria used to determine winners of the Five Star Champions of Character Award by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. This year the athletic program at Rocky Mountain College has been notified it is a recipient of the 2009-2010 NAIA honor.

"Rocky has long been a place where the student athletes have excelled in the classroom and in their respective arenas. It is great to be a Champion of Character Institution and it reflects well on our student athletes, our coaches and their hard work, but it also speaks to the type of school Rocky Mountain College has always been," said Robert Beers, Rocky Mountain College Athletic Director

Rocky’s program scored well for its athletes maintaining an above average cumulative grade point average and for its involvement in many outreach activities in the community.

The NAIA Champions of Character program continues to grow and impact people throughout the nation as a result of the passion and commitment of NAIA member institutions such as RMC, according to Lori Thomas, NATA senior vice president for membership and character initiatives.
