Student Code of Conduct

Student Code of Conduct

Rocky Mountain College students strive to be thinking, caring, compassionate and engaged members of the College and broader community. As such, RMC students, having made a choice to join the community, strive to improve themselves, affirm others and actively involve themselves in enhancing the community. These ideals require that RMC students establish high expectations for ourselves and for others, and that we clearly define those expectations.

RMC Students...

- take responsibility for their own learning and personal development.
- challenge each other to develop intellectually and ethically.
- practice academic and personal integrity.
- consider and seek to understand different ideas and points of view.
- conduct themselves with dignity and civility in our interactions with one another.
- care about others' welfare and seek to be responsive to their needs.
- strive to keep one another safe from physical and emotional harm.
- respect the dignity and worth of all persons and celebrate differences in their many forms.
- reject bigotry without compromise.
- respect the rights and property of others.
- accept responsibility for their actions, bear the consequences of those actions and learn from them.

Rocky Mountain College is a community of scholars in which the ideals of freedom of inquiry, freedom of thought, freedom of expression, and freedom of the individual are sustained. However, the exercise and preservation of these freedoms and rights require a respect for the rights of all in the community to enjoy them to the same extent. It is clear that in a community of learning, willful disruption of the educational process, destruction of property, and interference with the orderly process of the College cannot be tolerated. Students enrolling in the college assume an obligation to conduct themselves, both on campus and in the broader community, in a manner compatible with the college's mission as well as the expectations outlined above.
